Most of the members of the Southwell opera troupe left on the Australia yesterday. The "dear girls" were most broken smiles. It was very evident that they found it very hard to tear themselves away from Honolulu. Hundred of their friends and admirers were on the wharf to see them off.

Many appoint one of the date hereof or they will be foreign their number to be their clerk, to preserve minutes of the proceedings before them, which minutes shall be delivered to the prosecuting officer, when so directed by the grand tury. Many tears were shed, and many and varied were the touching good-byes.

The farewell kisses that were thrown as the steamer got away were but reminders of more substantial embraces on the deck of the vessel just before the gangways were cast away. Some of the girls didn't go; they have become entranced with the country and will tarry here a while. Tillte Sallinger and Phil Branson are among the talent left
